Reminder of Traffic Management Switch - A11 Spooner Row to Tuttle Interchange reconstruction scheme

I just wanted to send a reminder to highlight that our traffic management contraflow will switch over from the southbound to the northbound carriageway tonight and open at 6am on 12 January 2023.

New northbound contraflow

The scheme will continue to use a contraflow system to keep the A11 open during the reconstruction of the road, but it will now be located on the northbound carriageway. The carriageway will still be reduced to one lane in both directions as we work, whilst the speed limit through the scheme will remain at 40mph, so we can ensure the safety of our workers and the travelling public.

Slip roads and trial opening of Browick northbound entry slip

It's also important to note that some slip roads will continue to be closed for extended periods during the construction of the scheme. Please see the traffic management plan at the end of this letter for more information.

We'll be undertaking a trial opening of the Browick Road northbound entry slip for 6 weeks, from the start of the traffic management switch. This will be done to help northbound traffic that's also merging onto the A11, by using the northbound Tuttle Lane Interchange entry slip. We'll measure the success of the trial, before providing you with our results. If the trial is successful, then the Browick Road entry slip will remain open.

All dates are subject to change due to weather or operational requirements.
